

Magoé National Park is a protected area in Tete Province, Mozambique. The park was proclaimed in October 2013.[1] Previously the area was an integral part of the Tchuma Tchato Community wildlife management program.

Location[edit]

The park is 3,559 square kilometres (1,374 sq mi) in area and is situated on the southern banks of the giant Cahora Bassa Dam.[2]