

Civil Hospital, Larkana is a public hospital located in Larkana, Sindh.[1][2]

Contents

1 History

2 Departments

2.1 Other departments

3 Service area

4 Gallery

5 References

History[edit]

The cornerstone of this 100-bed hospital was laid by Khawaja Nizamuddin, Governor-General of Pakistan on February 1, 1951. The hospital was completed three years later, in 1954. Nawab Amir Ali Lahori provided land for the hospital. It was the first custom-built civil hospital in Larkana. Prior to the establishment of the hospital, the girls' school building on Baker Road was relocated in 1909 from Shikarpour (Sind) and was used as Larkana Civil Hospital.[3]

Departments[edit]

Hospital departments include MRI & CT Scan, Outdoor & Indoor Pharmacy, Digital X-ray & Ultrasound Doppler Ultrasound, the Ophthalmology, and Pediatric Ophthalmology.[4]

Other departments[edit]

National Institute of Cardiovascular Diseases, Larkana[5]

Psychology

Psychiatry

Chest Asthma

Ear Nose & Throat

Emergency Department

Orthopedics

Tuberculosis

AIDS

Hepatitis

Pathology

Urology

Nephrology

Hematology

General Physician

Pulmonary Department[6]

Service area[edit]

The territory of the Larkana Civil Hospital covers the Larkana district, Northern Sindh, and Balochistan. The hospital has a mobile service department.

Gallery[edit]

Patrolling Emergency Medical service

Founding Plaque

Building of Department of Ophthalmology

Plaque of department of Ophthalmology

Paediatric Ophthalmology building
Paediatric Ophthalmology plaque
Building of department of Cardiology