

Analamazaotra National Park is a wildlife reserve of Madagascar, and is part of Andasibe-Mantadia National Park. The reserve is toward the northeast portion of the island, and is nearly centered between the coast. The neighbouring Analamazaotra Forest Station is a local reforestation effort.

The reserve is situated in the region Alaotra-Mangoro, close to Moramanga and Andasibe.[1]

The Analamazaotra Special Reserve is located 27 km from Moramanga and is bordered by National road 2, a secondary road to Andasibe and a railway line between Antananarivo and Toamasina.