

The Lawrence Museum is a museum in Lawrence, New South Wales. It is situated in the former 2NR Broadcasting Station.[1][2] The museum contains artefacts associated with the history of telecommunications and radio broadcasting in Australia. It also contains photographs and artefacts related to the Lawrence Ferry.[3]

History[edit]

On 12 June 2004, the Museum was officially opened, by regional news editor ABC Radio Allan Rawson.[citation needed]